Those who had not the honour of making Miss Gordon Gumming's personal acquaintance when she visited Hongkong will at any rate have learned to appreciate her literary productions. The Contemporary Review for May, 1882, has an interesting article from her pen on "The Last They are precisely similar in form to the Spanish King of Tahiti," and as we intend including the flower-lore of the sammy south in our series of studies, we have thought it might not be amiss. to run through this essay, and glean from it such

Every one who has studied that district, either in peraware that Fiji and Tahiti do not fall behind the rest of the world for beauty of natural pro ductions. Dr. Seemann's "Mission to Viti," The Shanghai papers state that the especially chapters XVI, and XVII., abound wrook in question was that of the Empress. The facts which are of interest to the botanist and lover of nature, and Tahiti presents many features of a similar nature. From Miss Gordon Cumming's article (for we shall refer to "At Home in Fiji" another time), we learn that the following are some of the vegetable productions of Tahiti. The arrow root plant, the white hamboo, and the cocos-pales grow plentifully. "We drove through districts which seemed like one vast orehard of mango, bread-fruit, banana, facs, large orange tress, lemons, guavas, citrons, papamas, vanilla, coffee, sugar-cane, maize, and cocca-palm, together forming a succession of the richest and most varied foliage it is possible to conceive" (p. 827) With the exceptions, perhaps, of the three plants whose names I have italicized, everyone livingin Hongkong or China will be perfectly familiar with the whole of these fruits and trees. Then there is the vermilion plant, the seeds of which, together with charcoal, form the scarlet and black dya used in colouring the dress (p. 828). The iron-wood tree, also, of which more anon, i abundant, while the hybisous and the tree farms

also a plant which is known as the birds'-nest forn, while the Tabitians own a chestnut dignified with the name of Tamana (p. 835). Everyone has heard of the famous reva-reva. This is a filmy ribbon extracted from the cocoapalm leaf, and when made up into plumes and flowers is used for adorning the hair and person. and other emamental purposes. The operation absorbed. The defendant carried on business as of extracting the reverser is most difficult and a ship-charterer under the name of Fo Hang delicate, and requires a neat hand together with and had dispatched the steamer Malbbar to "The worker keeps a split stick, stuck in the ground beside her, and into its cleft festens one end of each ribbon as she poels it, otherwise the them was splitting one cause of action. It is this the plaintiff waived the $900 and took judgthe loveliest goassmer you can imagine," and may ment for $1,000, so as to bring the case within well be compared to fairy ribbons (p. 829). Several references are made to the decorative use of the reva-reva. When Miss Gordon Cumming reached Tahiti, on the occasion to which she refers, it was a time of mourning. " Now all looked sad and sombre. There were no flowers, no fragrant wreaths, no arrow-rect crowns, no snowy plumes of reva-rova; even the beautiful raven tresses of the women had all been sut off (so, at least, we were told, and certainly none struction will go on. But " I was delighted to discover (says the writer, p. 826) that many of the women, who were supposed to have out their beatiful long hair in mourning for old Queen Pomare, had only shammed, and their glossy black tresses were allowed to reappear." I made a "Chip" recently contrasting the Chinese custom of abstaining from the use of the reser during the period of special mourning with that of other people who call the razor or soissors into special requisition at such times. The Tahitians, it seems, followed the enswhich Mr. Fernandes might adduce as another proof that Africa and Polynesis once held intercourse. (See Farrar's "Primitive Manners and Customs," p. 143; Tylor in Maemillan, May, 1882,

Mrs. Brassey ("Voyage in the Sunboam") says she was charmed with the oustom of using flowers, garlands, and plumes as personal decorations in the Southern Seas. In Tahiti " yellow is happily admitted in Court mourning?" (p. 829), so that the people dress at such times. jects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, d in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast comomy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and unwards of 600,000 Chinese characother elementary works as yet published, the quires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which [1441] have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub-For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respectthe work will be found indispensable to all Enropeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly adjustated. To-parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion-It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarte pages.
